Producers Prospect Recruiter Field Manual

Draft 1

Quick Start Summary

Mitch, your job is not to "sell an IMO." Your job is to identify talented advisors and insurance professionals who are under-supported, under-branded, under-positioned, or under-leveraged — and show them a better growth platform.

Producers Prospect positions itself as a concierge-style support platform for financial advisors built around Prospect. Produce. Prosper. The firm's public-facing message emphasizes helping advisors modernize their practice through branding, marketing, sales support, events, coaching, digital presence, and content resources. Its website also highlights boutique service, CRM support, live events, webinars, podcasting, and advisor growth infrastructure.

Your mission

Move high-potential advisors and agents into deeper conversation with Producers Prospect by showing them three things:

- their current IMO may be giving them product access, but not real growth support
- their digital brand may not reflect the level of advisor they believe they are
- Producers Prospect can help them prospect better, produce more, and prosper faster

What success looks like

You win when you:

- start strong conversations
- uncover frustration with the current IMO relationship
- expose gaps in brand, visibility, follow-up, and sales process
- create urgency around missed opportunity
- book qualified meetings
- help move business relationships over time

Core recruiting thesis

Most advisors do not need another product sheet.
They need:

- clearer positioning
- stronger branding
- more lead flow
- better follow-up systems

- better conversion support
- a growth partner, not just a wholesaler

Your edge

You are not calling to “pitch a contract move.”
You are calling to diagnose:

- growth gap
- support gap
- branding gap
- visibility gap
- conversion gap

Then you connect those gaps to the Producers Prospect model.

Module 1: What Producers Prospect Is

Producers Prospect publicly describes itself as a one-stop solution for financial professionals looking to modernize their practice through forward-thinking brand and marketing strategies, product positioning, and digital-age resources. The site emphasizes comprehensive IMO support, personalized boutique service, white-glove concierge support, coaching, branding, website design, CRM tools, digital marketing, live events, webinars, video production, and sales training.

The model: Prospect → Produce → Prosper

Prospect

Get in front of more of the right clients.

Public messaging from Producers Prospect ties “Prospect” to lead generation through a strategy that combines live events and digital marketing to put advisors in front of more clients.

What this means in recruiter language:

- more visibility
- better lead flow
- stronger first impression
- more at-bats

Produce

Know what to say and convert more opportunities.

The firm's site ties "Produce" to messaging, software tools, and sales support that help advisors convert more leads into sales.

What this means in recruiter language:

- tighter talk tracks
- better event conversion
- stronger follow-up
- more confidence in the sales process

Prosper

Build a better business and a better life.

The firm's public message ties "Prosper" to helping advisors achieve ambitious goals and greater freedom.

What this means in recruiter language:

- increased production
- more confidence
- stronger business infrastructure
- less isolation
- a more scalable practice

Module 2: What Makes Producers Prospect Different

Generic IMO vs. Producers Prospect

A generic IMO often offers:

- carrier access
- product grids
- occasional wholesaler support
- broad, inconsistent marketing help
- reactive service

Producers Prospect is positioned publicly as offering:

- boutique IMO support with comprehensive marketing and sales support
- white-glove concierge service
- custom strategy
- brand development
- website design
- CRM and automation support
- database marketing
- digital marketing
- events and webinars
- TV, radio, podcast, and video support
- sales training and coaching
- customizable thought-leadership content
- access to products and broker-dealer resources through a broader support model

Core recruiting message

Do not position Producers Prospect as "just another IMO."
Position it as:

A growth platform for advisors who want more than product access.

Coach's Note

When an advisor says, "I already have an IMO," your internal response should be:

"You may have an IMO. But do you have a platform that helps you prospect, produce, and prosper?"

Module 3: Who Mitch Is Recruiting

Ideal prospect segments

1) Independent financial advisors

They care about

- credibility
- autonomy
- production
- client growth
- better support

They are frustrated by

- weak branding
- inconsistent lead flow
- doing everything themselves
- low-value IMO relationships

Why Producers Prospect matters

- helps them look bigger, sharper, and more credible
- helps them modernize their client acquisition engine

2) Insurance agents with annuity focus

They care about

- practical sales support
- product fit
- lead flow
- credibility with pre-retirees and retirees

They are frustrated by

- poor follow-up systems
- lack of marketing
- inconsistent appointment flow
- being treated like just another contract

Why Producers Prospect matters

- helps wrap better brand, sales support, and infrastructure around annuity production

3) Hybrid advisors

They care about

- efficient growth
- broader planning conversations
- standing out in a crowded market

They are frustrated by

- unclear messaging
- fragmented digital presence
- low conversion from online and event traffic

Why Producers Prospect matters

- creates cohesion across brand, messaging, and growth channels

4) Plateaued producers

They care about

- getting unstuck
- finding a better growth lever
- improving conversion

They are frustrated by

- same effort, same result
- no strategic outside perspective
- no fresh growth ideas

Why Producers Prospect matters

- introduces better positioning, better process, and better support

5) Advisors with weak digital footprint

They care about

- reputation
- professionalism
- referrals
- trust

They are frustrated by

- invisible online presence
- outdated website
- weak social proof
- inconsistent messaging

Why Producers Prospect matters

- this is one of the firm's clearest public value propositions: helping advisors build a cohesive brand and digital presence, and supporting thought leadership through content, media, and marketing assets.

Module 4: FIA Fundamentals for a Recruiter

What a Fixed Indexed Annuity is

A fixed indexed annuity is an insurance product designed to provide principal protection from market loss, while crediting interest based on the performance of an external index subject to the contract's rules, limitations, and optional features.

What it is not

It is not:

- a direct stock market investment
- a security that gives full market upside
- a one-size-fits-all solution
- appropriate for every client
- a substitute for full financial planning

Who FIAs are generally right for

Often a fit for people who want some combination of:

- principal protection
- tax deferral
- retirement income planning
- limited upside linked to an index
- a more conservative sleeve inside a retirement strategy

Who they may not be right for

Often not ideal for people who:

- need full liquidity
- want aggressive market participation
- may need the entire account in the near term
- do not understand surrender schedules or contract tradeoffs

How advisors commonly use them

At a high level, advisors often use FIAs for:

- protected accumulation
- future income planning

- pension-like income supplementation
- sequence-of-returns risk mitigation
- conservative retirement allocation planning

Key concepts Mitch must understand

Surrender charges

A time-based penalty schedule if money is withdrawn above allowed limits during the surrender period.

Caps

A maximum credited return under a strategy.

Spreads

A percentage deducted from the index gain before interest is credited.

Participation rates

The percentage of the index gain used in the crediting formula.

Income riders / GLWB

Optional riders that can create future guaranteed withdrawal benefits, usually for lifetime income, subject to contract terms.

Enhanced death benefit riders

Optional features designed to improve legacy outcomes under certain contract structures.

Confinement / chronic care style enhancements

Some contracts include features tied to health or confinement events, depending on carrier design.

Mitch’s rule

You are not the product explainer of last resort.
You only need to be strong enough to:

- speak intelligently
- ask good questions

- not overstate
- create confidence
- hand off detailed product conversations appropriately

Safe recruiter language

Use:

- “At a high level…”
- “Generally speaking…”
- “That depends on the product and client situation…”
- “I’m speaking conceptually here, not product-specifically…”

Avoid:

- “This is always the best solution”
- “Your clients will definitely get…”
- “This product beats the market”
- “There’s no downside at all”

Module 5: Must-Watch YouTube Learning Playlist

Below is a tight watchlist for Mitch. I selected videos that appear directly relevant to FIA basics, riders, and retirement-income use cases. Verify final suitability internally before formal compliance use.

1) FIA basics

Fixed Indexed Annuity Basics for Retirees: Pros, Cons, and How They Work — Oak Harvest Financial Group. Good overview of mechanics, misconceptions, and practical use cases.

Basics of Fixed Indexed Annuities — a plain-English beginner video focused on core FIA structure and fit.

2) Income riders

What is a Fixed Indexed Annuity with Income Rider? — Retirement Planning Education. Useful for understanding GLWB-style concepts at a practical level.

Fixed Indexed Annuities | Income Rider - Why, How, When — focused specifically on when and why income riders are used.

3) Broader retirement income context

How to Use Annuities for Lifetime Income — featuring Dr. Wade Pfau and Dr. Michael Finke, useful for understanding why annuities matter in retirement-income architecture.

Episode 76: Fixed Index Annuities: Do they present a best of… — another Wade Pfau-related resource that helps frame FIA tradeoffs and features in a more analytical context.

4) Simple overview with riders and contract levers

Fixed Index Annuities Explained in Simple Steps! — useful because it explicitly references caps, spreads, participation rates, riders, liquidity rules, and use cases in one place.

5) Producers Prospect content

Producers Prospect YouTube channel / Prospect, Produce, Prosper — Mitch should monitor this for how the firm talks publicly about advisor growth, AI, service, branding, and recruiting themes.

Coach's Note

These videos are not there to make Mitch a technician.
They are there to make him:

- fluent
- comfortable
- credible
- capable of asking better questions

Module 6: Prospecting Playbook

Where to find recruitable advisors

- LinkedIn
- advisor websites
- seminar marketers
- annuity seminar speakers
- local independent agents

- podcast guests
- webinar hosts
- advisors with weak online presence but strong local footprint
- advisors with decent production and poor branding
- advisors who look successful offline but invisible online

Signals someone is recruitable

- outdated website
- weak LinkedIn profile
- inconsistent branding
- generic messaging
- no niche clarity
- little or no thought leadership
- poor follow-up infrastructure
- low social proof
- flat digital presence
- all product, no brand
- active, but sloppy
- capable, but not packaged well

Warm outreach angles

- compliment a strong niche
- reference a podcast appearance
- reference an event topic
- reference their public profile
- offer quick brand-pack perspective

Cold outreach angles

- “I work with advisors who are producing but under-supported.”
- “A lot of advisors have product access, but not growth infrastructure.”
- “I spent a few minutes reviewing your brand pack and had a couple thoughts.”
- “You may be stronger than what your digital footprint is communicating.”

14-business-day follow-up cadence

Day 1

- call
- voicemail
- LinkedIn profile view
- email

Day 3

- call
- short follow-up email

Day 5

- LinkedIn connection request
- text if appropriate

Day 7

- brand-pack angle message

Day 9

- AI visibility angle message

Day 11

- direct “not sure if this is relevant, but…” call

Day 14

- breakup / permission-based close

Module 7: Brand Pack / Digital Footprint Audit

What a brand pack is

An advisor’s visible brand ecosystem:

- website
- LinkedIn
- Instagram
- Facebook
- YouTube
- podcast
- Google presence
- reviews

- media mentions
- event pages
- booking page
- bio
- articles
- lead magnets

The question Mitch is asking

“Is what you’re really about as an advisor the same thing your brand is saying online?”

Audit checklist

Score each from 1 to 5:

1. Clarity

- Can I tell who they serve?
- Can I tell what they do?
- Can I tell why they are different?

2. Credibility

- Do they look current?
- Is the website professional?
- Is the brand cohesive?

3. Trust

- Testimonials?
- Reviews?
- Media?
- Social proof?
- Proof of real expertise?

4. Niche strength

- Is a niche clear?
- Is the language generic or specific?
- Is there an obvious ideal client?

5. Visibility

- Are they posting?
- Are they searchable?

- Is their content recent?
- Are they present where prospects look?

6. AI discoverability

- Is there enough clear language online for AI tools to understand what they do?
- Is there enough evidence for AI to trust the recommendation?

Score interpretation

- 24–30: strong but may still need scaling help
- 18–23: capable advisor, inconsistent brand
- 12–17: real opportunity
- under 12: invisible or off-message

Mitch's takeaway

Weak brand pack = recruiting opportunity.

Not because you insult them.
Because you show them the gap between:

- who they are
- what they want to become
- what the market currently sees

Module 8: AI Visibility Angle

Why this matters

Producers Prospect's own public content and LinkedIn updates show an active focus on AI, including messaging around how advisors can use AI effectively and how poor inputs lead to poor outputs. The company's website, podcast ecosystem, and LinkedIn presence all reinforce the idea that modern visibility and messaging matter.

The recruiting insight

Prospects are increasingly using AI tools to evaluate professionals.
That means more advisor discovery is shifting toward:

- clear online evidence

- trust signals
- structured content
- digital consistency
- public expertise footprint

The core teaching point for Mitch

When AI gives a prospect just a few firms, that is a big deal.

It means the firms being surfaced likely have:

- enough public evidence to be understood
- enough specificity to be matched to a niche
- enough trust signals to be recommended

Mitch's verbal version

"A lot of advisors still think visibility is about SEO or social posting alone. But more prospects are using AI to compare advisors directly. If your digital footprint is weak, generic, or inconsistent, you may not even enter the conversation."

Mitch's email version

I've been watching how AI tools are changing advisor discovery. More prospects are now asking ChatGPT and Claude who they should interview, and why. The firms that show up usually have clear positioning, relevant proof, and enough online evidence for the model to trust. If your brand doesn't reflect your real value, you may be invisible in a category where visibility is compounding.

Mitch's LinkedIn DM version

Quick thought: a lot of advisor discovery is shifting into AI-driven search. If your brand, niche, and proof aren't clear online, you may be stronger in real life than you look digitally. That gap is becoming expensive.

AI visibility test prompt

Use this exact framework:

"I am a [ideal client] in [city/state]. I'm looking for a financial advisor who specializes in [niche]. Who would you recommend and why?"

Then ask follow-ups:

- Why were these firms chosen?
- What signals made them credible?
- What content did you rely on?
- What would make another advisor more recommendable?

How Mitch should use the result

- if the prospect is not surfaced, that is a pain point
- if competitors show up, that is a wedge
- if the prospect looks generic, that is a positioning gap
- if the prospect's brand is weak, Producers Prospect has a relevant solution

Module 9: Soft and Direct Messaging

A. Soft messaging

5 opener lines

- "I spent a few minutes looking at your practice and thought you had a strong foundation."
- "You look like someone who has built something real, which is why I wanted to reach out."
- "I talk with advisors who are doing good work but not always getting the support they deserve."
- "This may or may not be relevant, but I had a few ideas after reviewing your online presence."
- "You seem established — I'm curious whether your current platform is helping you grow the way it should."

5 discovery questions

- "What's working best for you right now?"
- "Where do you feel under-supported?"
- "How much help do you get beyond product access?"
- "How are you currently generating new opportunities?"
- "Do you feel like your digital brand reflects the quality of your practice?"

5 transition statements

- "That's exactly the kind of gap we help advisors close."
- "That's where a growth platform can make a huge difference."
- "A lot of advisors we talk to say the same thing."
- "That usually points to a support issue, not a talent issue."

- “You may be closer than you think — the infrastructure may just be lagging.”

5 appointment-setting lines

- “Would it be worth 20 minutes to compare what you have versus what’s possible?”
- “I think a short strategy call could be useful.”
- “Let’s pressure-test whether there’s a fit.”
- “Would next week be crazy for a quick conversation?”
- “No hard pitch — just a smarter look at what support could look like.”

B. Direct messaging

5 opener lines

- “A lot of advisors are loyal to IMOs that are no longer helping them grow.”
- “If your current IMO is only giving you product access, that’s not real support.”
- “The market is changing fast, and too many advisors are under-equipped.”
- “If your brand, visibility, and sales process are weak, staying put gets expensive.”
- “You may be leaving growth on the table simply because your infrastructure is behind.”

5 discovery questions

- “What is your IMO doing for you besides contracts?”
- “How are they helping you generate opportunities?”
- “How are they helping you convert?”
- “How are they helping your brand show up online?”
- “If I looked at your growth over the last year, what support did they really provide?”

5 transition statements

- “That sounds like maintenance, not growth support.”
- “That’s usually where advisors realize they’ve outgrown the relationship.”
- “You’ve got production capability — the platform just may not match it.”
- “That gap is exactly where momentum leaks.”
- “At some point, staying comfortable becomes more expensive than changing.”

5 appointment-setting lines

- “Let’s do a straight comparison.”
- “Give me 20 minutes and I’ll show you where the hidden gap is.”
- “You don’t need a pitch. You need a benchmark.”
- “Let’s see whether your current setup is actually helping you win.”
- “If there’s no fit, no problem — but you should at least know.”

Module 10: Call Scripts

1) First cold call to an advisor

“Hi [Name], this is Mitch with Producers Prospect. I’ll keep it brief. We work with independent advisors and insurance professionals who want more than just product access from an IMO. I came across your practice and wanted to ask a simple question: do you feel fully supported in how you’re growing right now — not just in products, but in branding, lead flow, and sales support?”

If yes:
“Fair enough. Out of curiosity, what does strong support look like in your world today?”

If somewhat / not really:
“That’s exactly why I called. We work with advisors who are talented, but whose platform isn’t helping them prospect, produce, and prosper the way it should. Would a short conversation next week be unreasonable?”

---

2) First follow-up call after no response

“Hi [Name], Mitch here again with Producers Prospect. I reached out because we spend a lot of time with advisors who are good at what they do but whose current setup isn’t doing enough to help them grow. I had a look at your public brand footprint and thought there may be an opportunity worth discussing. Do you have two minutes?”

---

3) Soft consultative call

“Before I tell you anything about us, I’d rather understand you. What part of growth feels the heaviest right now — finding opportunities, converting them, or building a brand that actually reflects the quality of your practice?”

---

4) Direct “why stay with your current IMO?” call

“Let me ask this directly: if your current IMO disappeared tomorrow, what would you actually miss besides the contract? Because if the answer is ‘not much,’ that usually tells me the relationship is functional, not strategic.”

---

5) Brand pack audit call

“Hi [Name], Mitch with Producers Prospect. I took a few minutes to review your brand pack — your website, LinkedIn, and public-facing presence — because we work with advisors on growth positioning. The reason I’m calling is simple: I think you may be better than what your brand is currently communicating. That creates a trust gap, and in today’s market that gap can cost real opportunities. I’d love to share two or three observations and see whether they resonate. Open to that?”

---

6) AI visibility wake-up call

“Something we’re seeing more often is prospects using ChatGPT and Claude to compare advisors before they ever fill out a form or book a call. If your online footprint is thin or generic, you may never make that shortlist. I think a lot of strong advisors are more invisible than they realize. Have you ever tested whether your practice is being surfaced in those searches?”

---

7) Appointment-setting call

“Based on what you’ve shared, I don’t think this needs a long process. The next step is just a focused strategy conversation to compare where you are versus what a more growth-oriented support platform could look like. Would Tuesday or Thursday be better?”

8) Re-engagement call for old lead

“Hi [Name], Mitch here. We spoke a while back and I wanted to circle back because the issues we discussed — brand clarity, support, and growth infrastructure — have only become more important. I thought of you because advisors who delay this usually don’t lose ability — they lose momentum.”

---

9) Referral-source introduction script

“Hi [Name], I’m Mitch with Producers Prospect. We help advisors grow by improving the infrastructure around their business — brand, visibility, marketing, sales support, and positioning. If you know advisors who are producing but clearly under-supported, I’d value the chance to connect. Our sweet spot is helping capable advisors unlock more from what they already built."

---

10) Voicemail

"Hi [Name], this is Mitch with Producers Prospect. I'm reaching out because I believe there may be a gap between the quality of your practice and how your brand and support platform are currently helping you grow. Nothing urgent — I just thought a short conversation could be worthwhile. I'll follow up by email as well."

---

11) Full script: the Brand Pack download angle

"Hi [Name], Mitch with Producers Prospect. I know this is out of the blue, but I wanted to tell you why I'm calling. I took a little time to download your brand pack — meaning I looked through your website, LinkedIn, social presence, and the rest of your public footprint — because part of what we do is help advisors close the gap between who they really are and what the market sees.

What stood out to me is that you seem to have real substance, but I'm not sure your brand is fully saying that yet.

And I don't mean that as criticism. In fact, it's usually the opposite. A lot of strong advisors are better in real life than they look online.

When that happens, a few things usually break:

- prospects don't immediately understand the niche
- trust takes longer to build
- referrals have less reinforcement
- AI tools and digital search can't confidently surface the advisor
- competitors with better packaging can win attention first

What I'm curious about is whether you've ever looked at your digital presence through that lens: does what your brand says online really match what you're about as an advisor?

Because if not, that's not just a branding issue. It's a growth issue.

That's one of the reasons I'm with Producers Prospect. We work with advisors who may already have talent, relationships, and production, but need stronger support around brand, positioning, lead flow, and conversion.

I'd be happy to walk you through a few observations I had and see whether any of it resonates. No pressure. Would a quick 20-minute conversation next week be worth it?"

If interested:
"Great. I'll keep it practical — just a few outside observations and where I think the biggest leverage points are."

If defensive:
"Totally fair. I'm not suggesting you've done anything wrong. I'm suggesting there may be growth being left on the table because the market can only judge what it sees."

Module 11: Email, LinkedIn, and Text Templates

Cold email

Subject: Quick thought on your advisor brand

Hi [Name],
I spent a few minutes looking at your practice and had one immediate thought: you may be stronger than what your current brand and digital footprint are communicating.

I work with Producers Prospect, and we help advisors close that gap through better positioning, support, and growth infrastructure.

Worth a quick conversation?
— Mitch

Warm email

Subject: Thought after reviewing your practice

Hi [Name],
I came across your practice and liked what you're building. I also saw a few places where your online presence may not fully reflect the quality of the work you do.

That's something we help advisors tighten up at Producers Prospect — not just product access, but the brand, visibility, and sales support around the business.

Open to a short conversation?
— Mitch

LinkedIn connection request

Enjoyed looking through your profile. I work with advisors on growth, positioning, and support infrastructure. Thought it made sense to connect.

LinkedIn DM after connection

Thanks for connecting. Quick thought: a lot of advisors are far better than what their digital footprint communicates. That gap is becoming more expensive as prospects and AI tools evaluate firms online. Happy to share a few observations if useful.

Follow-up email

Hi [Name],
Following up because I think there may be a real conversation here around support, visibility, and growth infrastructure.

A lot of advisors have an IMO relationship. Fewer have a platform that actively helps them grow.

Worth exploring?
— Mitch

Follow-up text

Hi [Name], Mitch with Producers Prospect. Reaching out because I think there may be a gap between your current support platform and the growth potential of your practice. Open to a short chat next week?

“Saw your brand online” message

I reviewed your site and public profile briefly. My takeaway: you appear to have more substance than your online brand is currently signaling. That's fixable — and often high leverage.

"AI visibility" message

A lot of advisor discovery is moving into AI-assisted search. If your niche, trust signals, and brand clarity aren't obvious online, you may be invisible in places prospects are already looking.

"Growth plateau" message

Sometimes the issue is not effort. It's infrastructure. Advisors plateau when the platform around them stops matching their ambition.

Module 12: Objection Handling

"I'm happy where I am."

Usually means: I don't want a sales pitch.
Wrong response: "But we're better."
Right response: "That's good to hear. Out of curiosity, what's working especially well?"
Soft rebuttal: "I'm not trying to disrupt what's working — just benchmark it."
Direct rebuttal: "A lot of advisors feel 'fine' until they compare support more closely."

"I already have an IMO."

Usually means: I see you as interchangeable.
Wrong response: "We have better products."
Right response: "Makes sense. What are they doing for you beyond contracts?"
Soft rebuttal: "This may be less about replacing and more about evaluating support."
Direct rebuttal: "If it's mostly product access, that's not the same as growth support."

"I'm not moving business right now."

Usually means: Timing resistance.
Soft rebuttal: "Totally fair. This could just be a conversation about readiness."
Direct rebuttal: "That's exactly why now is useful — before urgency forces the decision."

“I don’t need marketing help.”

Usually means: I don’t want fluff.
Soft rebuttal: “Understood. We’re not talking about random posting. We’re talking about trust, positioning, and conversion support.”
Direct rebuttal: “If the market can’t clearly see your value, marketing is already affecting growth whether you call it that or not.”

“I just need product access.”

Usually means: I don’t yet see the bigger opportunity.
Soft rebuttal: “That may be true today. The question is whether that helps you grow.”
Direct rebuttal: “Product access is table stakes. Growth infrastructure is what changes trajectory.”

“Send me information.”

Usually means: Low commitment.
Soft rebuttal: “Happy to. What would be most relevant?”
Direct rebuttal: “I can send information, but it’ll mean more if I understand where the gap is first.”

“I don’t have time.”

Usually means: low priority.
Soft rebuttal: “Understood. That’s why I’m suggesting a short conversation, not a process.”
Direct rebuttal: “The advisors who make time for this usually do because they know growth problems get more expensive when ignored.”

“My clients come from referrals.”

Usually means: I don’t think brand matters.
Soft rebuttal: “That’s a great base. Strong branding reinforces referrals and helps them convert faster.”
Direct rebuttal: “Referrals still Google you.”

“We already have a website.”

Usually means: I think this is cosmetic.
Soft rebuttal: “The question isn’t whether you have one. It’s whether it’s working strategically.”
Direct rebuttal: “Having a website and having a high-performing brand asset are not the same thing.”

“I’m not trying to become a social media person.”

Usually means: I resist performative marketing.
Soft rebuttal: “That’s not the goal. The goal is clarity, trust, and relevance.”
Direct rebuttal: “You don’t need to be an influencer. You do need to be findable and credible.”

Module 13: Daily Execution Plan

Daily rhythm

8:00–8:30

- review pipeline
- prioritize targets
- prep call notes

8:30–10:30

- first call block
- highest-value targets first

10:30–11:00

- CRM updates
- next steps scheduled

- brand-pack research
- AI visibility testing
- LinkedIn touchpoints

1:00–2:30

- second call block
- follow-up calls
- appointment-setting focus

2:30–3:00

- emails and texts

3:00–4:00

- sourcing new prospects
- list building
- referral outreach

4:00–4:30

- KPI review
- tomorrow setup

Weekly rhythm

- Monday: pipeline review and top-25 focus list
- Tuesday: heavy outbound
- Wednesday: meetings + follow-up
- Thursday: heavy outbound
- Friday: reactivation, reporting, cleanup, lessons learned

Module 14: KPI Scorecard

Track weekly:

- dials
- conversations
- quality conversations
- appointments booked
- appointments held
- follow-up touches completed
- emails sent
- LinkedIn touches
- new prospects added
- brand packs reviewed
- AI visibility audits completed
- opportunities advanced
- recruited advisors in pipeline
- contracts moved / producers recruited
- CRM note quality

Minimum behavioral KPIs

- 50+ outbound touches per day

- 2 focused call blocks
- 5+ meaningful conversations per day
- 2–5 meetings booked per week
- CRM updated daily

Module 15: Producers Prospect Reference Appendix

The official Producers Prospect website presents the company as a support platform for advisors with services including marketing support, sales resources, events and webinars, podcast content, testimonials, team pages, and booking/contact pathways. The site footer also links directly to Instagram, LinkedIn, and YouTube.

Core resources Mitch should know

Official website

Producers Prospect website — main firm site for positioning, service overview, testimonials, team, podcast, blog, and booking. Use it as the first proof point in follow-up.

Meeting / sales page

Meet Producers Prospect — landing page that explicitly frames the firm as a concierge service tailored to helping advisors prospect, produce, and prosper. Good for follow-up when someone needs the bigger picture fast.

Marketing support page

Use this page when discussing brand development, digital presence, and advisor modernization.

Sales resources page

Use this when the prospect is more sales-process oriented and wants to know how support goes beyond branding.

Events and webinars

Use this when the advisor is interested in seminar or event-driven growth.

Team page

Use when the prospect wants to know who is behind the firm. The team page highlights Marc Rogers and the expert support framing.

Module 16: Final Recruiter Mindset

Mitch, remember this:

You are not in the business of asking advisors to “switch IMOs.”
You are in the business of helping the right advisor realize:

- they have outgrown commodity support
- their brand may be lagging behind their ability
- their current setup may be costing them opportunity
- they may need a platform, not just a contract

The mindset

- sell transformation, not access
- sell support, not hype
- sell clarity, not pressure
- sell opportunity, not fear
- sell growth infrastructure, not noise

Your real message

“You may already be good. The question is whether your current support platform is helping the market see it — and helping you capitalize on it.”

One-Page Recruiter Cheat Sheet

What to say fast

“Most advisors don’t need more product access. They need stronger support around brand, lead flow, conversion, and visibility. That’s where Producers Prospect is different.”

Three questions to ask every prospect

- What is your current IMO doing for you beyond contracts?
- Does your online brand reflect the level of advisor you really are?
- Where do you feel under-supported right now: prospecting, producing, or scaling?

Three wedges

- weak brand pack
- weak AI visibility
- weak growth support

Three outcomes you sell

- more qualified visibility
- better conversion support
- stronger business infrastructure

Best first meeting hook

“I reviewed your public brand footprint and think there may be a gap between the quality of your practice and how clearly it’s being communicated. That’s usually worth a conversation.”

Best direct line

“If your current IMO mainly gives you product access, that’s a vendor relationship — not a growth partnership.”

Best soft line

“You may be closer than you think. The support platform may just not be matching your ambition.”
